

PURSUING THE GLOBAL COMMON GOOD

Principle and Practice in U.S. Foreign Policy

Edited by Sally Steenland, Peter Rundlet,
Michael H. Fuchs & David Buckley

Center for American Progress

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Melody C. Barnes is the Executive Vice President for Policy at the Center for American Progress.

David Buckley is an international relations Ph.D. student at Georgetown University and former Program Manager at Faith in Public Life.

Tom Daschle is a Distinguished Senior Fellow at the Center for American Progress, advisor to Alston and Bird LLP, Visiting Professor at Georgetown University, and former U.S. Senate Majority Leader.

Dr. Elizabeth G. Ferris is a Senior Fellow in Foreign Policy Studies at the Brookings Institution and Co-Director of the Brookings-Bern Project on Internal Displacement.

Michael H. Fuchs is a Research Associate for National Security and International Policy at the Center for American Progress.

Kumar Garg is a law student at Yale University.

J. Bryan Hehir is the Parker Gilbert Montgomery Professor of the Practice of Religion and Public Life at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

Rev. Dr. Bernice Powell Jackson serves as the North American President of the World Council of Churches and is a clergy person with the United Church of Christ.

Barbara Lerman-Golomb is the former Executive Director of the Coalition on the Environment and Jewish Life.

Denis McDonough is Senior Fellow and Senior Advisor to Distinguished Senior Fellow Tom Daschle at the Center for American Progress.

John D. Podesta is the President and Chief Executive Officer of the Center for American Progress and former Chief of Staff to President William J. Clinton.

Imam Feisal Abdul Rauf is Chairman of the Cordoba Initiative, an organization that works to heal the relationship between the Islamic world and the West, founder and CEO of the American Society for Muslim Advancement, and Imam of Masjid Al-Farah, a mosque in New York City.

Rev. Dr. William F. Schulz is a Senior Fellow at the Center for American Progress, former President of the Unitarian Universalist Association of Congregations, and former Executive Director of Amnesty International USA.

Andrew Tillman is a graduate student at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University.

“Many often deride the influence of values and religious beliefs in the making of U.S. foreign policy as irrelevant or not in the ‘national interest.’ This couldn’t be further from the truth. Pursuing the Global Common Good tells us why.”

Madeleine K. Albright, former U.S. Secretary of State and author of The Mighty and the Almighty

“American foreign policy has been at its best when it linked our national interest to an engagement with the global common good. Our religious traditions are at their best when they challenge us to find realistic ways of engaging the world that are true to our moral commitments and our values. At a moment when we badly need creative thinking, Pursuing the Global Common Good is exciting because it suggests steps that are, at once, right, practical and visionary. By suggesting that there can be such a thing as a ‘common good’ in world affairs, this book will help open the debate we need.”

E. J. Dionne Jr., syndicated columnist, Senior Fellow in the Governance Studies Program at the Brookings
Institution and author of the forthcoming book, *Souled
Out: Renewing Faith and Politics After the Religious Right*

“Our deepest beliefs and religious traditions tell us to respect all humanity and seek justice and peace on earth. Why, then, would we separate our highest principles from the activities of our representative government? By demonstrating how moral vision can have a concrete impact on policy, Pursuing the Global Common Good makes a convincing case for a U.S. foreign policy that lives up to our highest ideals.”

Rabbi David Saperstein, Director, Religious Action
Center for Reform Judaism

Center for American Progress

