

Hope After Harm

State scoring breakdown

The Center for American Progress and Common Justice developed the State Victim Compensation Statute Rubric as a common framework through which survivors, advocates, legislators, administrators, and the public can better understand gaps and opportunities for improvement in state victim compensation law. This document provides the complete breakdown of how New York scored in the State Victim Compensation Statute Rubric. For each scoring criteria, the raw score and explanation is given based on existing statute and/or administrative code. States are evaluated based on 30 separate criteria that are grouped into four categories. The raw score and the weighted score—calculated by applying the category multiplier, a number between 1 and 2 determined based on insights gathered from survivor focus groups—are presented at the top of each category. The rubric's categories and corresponding multipliers are, in order of appearance: awareness and accessibility (x1.25), adequate compensation (x1), eligibility barriers (x1.75), and experience with the process (x1.5). This rubric is intended to serve as a tool for those seeking to reform victim compensation statute in New York and to ultimately ensure their victim compensation program better serves all survivors of violence.

New York

Total score: 45.13/57.25

Awareness and accessibility

States are evaluated based on language accessibility, procedures for informing survivors of their right to apply for victim compensation, and time requirements for reporting harm or applying for compensation.

Weighted score: 6.25/7.5

Multiplier: 1.25

Raw score: 5/6

Category	Points Awarded For	Evaluation	Explanation
Inform victim requirement	It is important that state statute, at a bare minimum, requires responding law enforcement officers, medical providers, or the district or state attorneys general interacting with survivors of violence to proactively inform survivors of the availability of victim compensation. States receive the maximum of 1 point if, in statute pertaining to victim compensation or in the state's victims' bill of rights, there is an active requirement that the responsible law enforcement agency, medical provider, district attorney, or state's attorney must inform victims or survivors of the availability of victim compensation. States receive 0 points if there is no such active requirement to inform victims or survivors of the availability of victim compensation. In cases where state statute or the state's victims' bill of rights indicates that victims and survivors of victims have a right to be informed of victim compensation but fails to designate who is responsible for informing them about victim compensation, states receive 0 points.	1/1	C.L.N.Y § 18-22-625-A states, "Every victim who reports a crime in any manner whatsoever shall be given notice about the rights of crime victims and the existence of all relevant local victim's assistance programs and services ... and supplied by the person receiving the report with information." As New York explicitly requires in statute that the law enforcement agency must proactively provide information about victim compensation, New York receives 1 point for this category.

Language accessibility	It is important that survivors do not face unnecessary language barriers when applying for victim compensation, which may make applying for this financial relief inaccessible to them. States should make application materials available in a variety of languages that reflect the needs of their population. States receive the maximum of 1 point if application materials are available on the administering agency's official website in all languages that at least 5 percent of all households in the state speak at home. States receive 0 points if application materials are not available in at least one language spoken by more than 5 percent of the state's households.	1/1	According to the U.S. Census Bureau, 14.8 percent of households in New York speak Spanish at home, 9.1 percent of households in New York speak an Indo-European language other than English at home, and 5.1 percent of households in New York speak an Asian or Pacific Islander language at home. New York's Office of Victim Services offers application materials in English, Arabic, Bengali, Chinese, French, Haitian Creole, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Polish, Russian, Spanish, Urdu, and Yiddish. New York therefore receives 1 point for this category.
Time limits: Reporting harm to law enforcement	Immediately following their victimization, survivors may not know about compensation or may not have the emotional capacity to go through an arduous application process. States should eliminate time limits for reporting violence and/or applying for victim compensation, which can work against the interest of healing. States receive the maximum of 2 points if there is no statutorily defined limitation on when survivors can report their harm to proper authorities to still be eligible to receive a victim compensation award. States receive 1 point if, in statute, victims are required to have reported their victimization to the proper authorities within a specified timeframe to be eligible to receive a victim compensation award but the state will make an exception to this requirement under a "good cause" clause or similar exception. States receive 0 points if, in statute, victims are required to have reported their victimization to the proper authorities within a specified timeframe to be eligible to receive a victim compensation award and there is no statutorily defined waiver or exception to this rule. States that require victims to have reported their victimization to the proper authorities within a specified timeframe to be eligible to receive a victim compensation award but also codify specific exceptions – including but not limited to being a victim of sexual assault or human trafficking and being a minor (under the age of 18) at the time of victimization – receive an additional 0.5 points.	2/2	Effective December 31, 2025, C.L.N.Y. § 18-22-631(1)(a) states, "No award shall be made unless the office finds that: a crime was indicated by the records of a support agency for survivors of crime or the records of a criminal justice agency." Subdivision C.L.N.Y. § 18-22-631(1)(c) goes on to define what are qualified support agencies under this rule. Under this definition, New York makes clear that victims of sexual assault may present records from a forensic physical examination and that victims of any sexual offense or family offense may present records from a family court. Further, subsection (c)(iii) provides that if a victim is unable to report to a criminal justice agency based on the victim's wellbeing, they may have present records from a victim service provider to be eligible for a victim compensation award. As this indicates, only victims who have good cause, therefore, may present records from a noncriminal justice agency in order to be eligible. However, under the revised language of C.L.N.Y. § 18-22-631(1)(a), New York does not create a time requirement for when a victim must report their harm to law enforcement. New York therefore receives 2 points for this category.

Time limits: Applying for victim compensation	Immediately following their victimization, survivors may not know about compensation or may not have the emotional capacity to go through an arduous application process. States should eliminate time limits for reporting violence and/or applying for victim compensation, which can work against the interest of healing. States receive the maximum of 2 points if, in statute, no limitation is placed on when victims can apply for compensation following their incident of harm to still be eligible to receive an award. States receive 1 point if, in statute, a limitation is placed on when victims can apply for compensation following their incident of harm to still be eligible to receive an award but will make exceptions to this requirement under a “good cause” clause or similar exception. States receive 0 points if, in statute, a limitation is placed on when victims can apply for compensation following their harm and still be eligible to receive an award, and there is no exception made to this rule. States that require victims to file an application for a victim compensation award within a specified timeframe from the time of their harm but also codify specific exceptions – including but not limited to being a victim of sexual assault or human trafficking and being a minor (under the age of 18) at the time of victimization – receive an additional 0.5 points.	1/2	Effective December 31, 2025, C.L.N.Y § 18-22-625(2) states the “claim must be filed by the claimant not later than three years after the occurrence or discovery of the crime upon which such claim is based.” C.L.N.Y § 18-22-625(2) further stipulates, “Upon good cause shown, the office may extend the time for filing.” Additionally it states, “The office shall extend the time for filing where the claimant received no notice pursuant to section six hundred twenty-five-a of this article and had no knowledge of eligibility pursuant to section six hundred twenty-four of this article.” As New York establishes a time limit for a victim to file a claim but explicitly provides that this requirement can be waived for good cause, New York receives 1 point for this category.

Adequate compensation

States are evaluated based on the explicit inclusion of expense categories survivors encounter over the course of their healing, as well as having adequate compensation caps to meet survivors' needs.

Weighted score: 11/14

Category	Points Awarded For	Evaluation	Explanation
Eligible expenses	As almost all awards are given to survivors through reimbursement or payments to vendors, states should make explicitly clear through statute, regulation, and publicly available documents which expenses will and will not be covered and make a wide range of expenses eligible to give survivors flexibility in the support they receive.
	States receive 1 point for each expense category explicitly included in either state statute or another publicly available resource, such as an online brochure produced by the state administering agency.
	States receive 0 points for each expense category that is not explicitly included in either state statute or a publicly available resource.
	Crime scene cleanup	1/1	Crime scene cleanup is listed as an eligible expense under C.L.N.Y § 18-22-631(2) , capped at $2,500.
	Replacement for property lost, damaged as a result of harm, or confiscated for the purpose of evidence collection	1/1	"Repair or replacement of articles of essential personal property lost, damaged, or destroyed" is listed at an eligible expense under C.L.N.Y § 18-22-631(2) .
	Relocation expenses	1/1	Relocation expenses are listed as an eligible expense under C.L.N.Y § 18-22-631(2) , capped at $2,500.
	Future economic support or loss of support for dependents	1/1	Loss of support is listed as an eligible expense under C.L.N.Y § 18-22-631(2) , capped at $600 per week.
	Security improvements	1/1	Security devices and securing a crime scene are listed as an eligible expense under C.L.N.Y § 18-22-631(2) .
	Travel	1/1	Travel expenses for necessary court appearances are listed as an eligible expense under C.L.N.Y § 18-22-631(2) .
	Bereavement leave	0/1	Bereavement leave is not explicitly listed as a covered expense under C.L.N.Y § 18-22-631(2) .
	Nontraditional healing modalities	0/1	Nontraditional healing modalities are not explicitly listed as a covered expense under C.L.N.Y § 18-22-631(2) .

	Replacement services/child care	0/1	Replacement services are not explicitly listed as a covered expense under C.L.N.Y § 18-22-631(2). Note: Administrators from the New York State Office of Victim Services note that C.L.N.Y § 18-22-626(1) states out-of-pocket expenses may include "other services necessary as a result of the injury upon which such claim is based." However, services once performed by a survivors that can no longer be as a result of harm are not explicitly named as an eligible expense.
	Legal fees, including fees related to compensation process (applications, claims, appeals, etc.)	1/1	"Attorney fees for representation before the agency" is listed as an eligible expense by New York's Office of Victim Services, capped $1,000.
	Accessibility modifications	1/1	Home and vehicle modifications are listed as an eligible expense by New York's Office of Victim Services.
Maximum allowable compensation	While not every incident of harm and its corresponding expenses will necessitate a maximum compensation award, the amount of victim compensation available to survivors is often not enough to meet their financial needs. States should ensure their compensation caps are aligned with the full extent of need. States receive the maximum of 2 points if the statutorily defined maximum compensation limit for all victims is equal to or above the estimated average cost of harm per victim of robbery in the state, after adjusting for cost of living. States receive 1 point if the maximum compensation limit is equal to or above the estimated average cost of harm per victim of robbery in the state, after adjusting for cost of living, but only under the condition that the victim has suffered a "permanent" or "catastrophic" injury. States receive 0 points if, under no condition, the statutorily defined maximum compensation limit, after adjusting for the cost of living, meets or exceeds the estimated average cost of harm per victim of robbery in the state.	2/2	C.L.N.Y § 18-22-631(2) establishes limits for certain expense categories, however, in statute, New York does not establish a statutory limit on medical costs or mental health counseling that can be covered by a victim compensation award. As New York does not establish a maximum compensation award limit allowable to victims, New York receives 2 points for this category.
Maximum allowable compensation for funeral and burial expenses	Due to the costliness and gravity of laying a loved one to rest, the sub-cap for funeral and burial expenses is considered individually. States receive the maximum of 1 point if, after adjusting for the cost of living, the statutorily defined maximum compensation limit for expenses related to funeral or burial services meets or exceeds the estimated 2023 median cost of burial with a vault. States receive 0 points if the statutorily defined maximum compensation limit for expenses related to funeral or burial services is below the estimated 2023 median cost of burial with a vault, after adjusting for the cost of living.	1/1	C.L.N.Y § 18-22-631(2) states that the expense cap for funeral and burial expenses is $12,000, effective November 5, 2025. Adjusted for the cost of living in New York, this is equivalent to $11,149.72. The 2023 estimated cost of a funeral with a vault, adjusted for the cost of living in New York, is $10,757.22. New York therefore receives 1 point for this category.

Eligibility barriers

States are evaluated based on the removal of harmful and restrictive policies, which reinforce existing inequities and penalize those at the margins.

Mandatory police reporting	Given that many survivors are uncomfortable dealing with law enforcement and the subjective, often biased nature of police reporting, states should not require survivors to report their victimization to law enforcement to be eligible to receive victim compensation and instead accept documentation from agencies not affiliated with the criminal legal system. States receive a maximum of 2 points if, in statute, victims are permitted to report their harm to entities not affiliated with the criminal legal system or a government agency – such as medical, mental health, or victim service providers – to demonstrate they have been a victim of violence. States receive 1 point if, in statute, victims are required to report their harm to law enforcement to demonstrate they have been a victim of violence but provide statutory exceptions due to good cause shown. States receive 0 points if, in statute, victims are required to report their harm to law enforcement and the state does not codify a good cause waiver to this requirement. States that require victims and survivors of victims to report their harm to police but also codify specific exceptions – including but not limited to being a victim of sexual assault or human trafficking and being a minor (under the age of 18) at the time of victimization – receive an additional 0.5 points.	1.5/2	Effective December 31, 2025, C.L.N.Y. § 18-22-631(1)(a) states, "No award shall be made unless the office finds that: a crime was indicated by the records of a support agency for survivors of crime or the records of a criminal justice agency." Subdivision C.L.N.Y. § 18-22-631(1)(c) goes on to define what are qualified support agencies under this rule. Under this definition, New York makes clear that victims of sexual assault may present records from a forensic physical examination and that victims of any sexual offense or family offense may present records from a family court. Furthermore, subsection (c)(iii) provides that if a victim is unable to report to a criminal justice agency based on the victim's well-being, they may have present records from a victim service provider to be eligible for a victim compensation award. As this indicates, only victims who have good cause, therefore, may present records from a noncriminal justice agency in order to be eligible. Because New York establishes a requirement that a victim must report their harm to a criminal justice agency to be eligible, but makes exceptions based on good cause and specific victim circumstances, New York receives 1.5 points for this category.

Police cooperation	Victim compensation application review processes are made less racially equitable by requiring and unnecessarily relying on the subjectivity of law enforcement's reports regarding victim cooperation. States should not assess victims' cooperativeness with law enforcement when making determinations on victim compensation claims. States receive a maximum of 2 points if, in statute, they do not make victim compensation eligibility contingent on the victim and/or applicant proving they have cooperated with law enforcement investigating their harm. States receive 1 point if, in statute, they make eligibility contingent on the victim and/or applicant proving that they have cooperated with law enforcement, but they also codify "good cause" or "reasonableness" exceptions to waive this requirement. States receive 0 points if, in statute, claimants are required to demonstrate that they have cooperated with law enforcement to be eligible to receive an award and do not include a "good cause" exception. States that do require cooperation with law enforcement to be eligible, but also codify any specific exceptions, including but not limited to, being a victim of sexual assault or human trafficking and being a minor (under the age of 18) at the time of victimization, receive an additional 0.5 points.	2/2	The rules for eligibility under C.L.N.Y. § 18-22-624 and the rules for receiving an award under C.L.N.Y. § 18-22-631 do not explicitly require that a victim prove that they have cooperated with law enforcement to be eligible to receive a victim compensation award. New York therefore receives 2 points for this category.
Contributory conduct: Reduction or denial for victim	Contributory conduct policies deny or reduce the amount of victim compensation someone can receive based on the victim's alleged role in their own harm. These policies perpetuate the false narrative that victims and survivors must be "innocent" or "perfect" to receive support and should be eliminated. States should remove this subjectively determined barrier to access. States receive the maximum of 2 points if, in statute, the state does not include provisions to deny or reduce victim compensation due to the victim's alleged conduct in the event leading up to their harm. States receive 0.5 points if, in statute, the state includes a provision to deny or reduce a victim compensation award based on the victim's alleged conduct but waives this consideration under specified mitigating circumstances, including but not limited to being a victim of sexual assault or human trafficking and being a minor (under the age of 18) at the time of victimization. State receives 0 points for this category if, in statute, the state includes a provision to deny or reduce a victim compensation award based on the victim's alleged conduct and does not codify any waivers under specified mitigating circumstances.	0.5/2	C.L.N.Y. § 18-22-631(5)(a) states, "In determining the amount of an award, the office shall determine whether, because of his conduct, the victim of such crime contributed to the infliction of his injury, and the office shall reduce the amount of the award or reject the claim altogether, in accordance with such determination." Furthermore, under 9 CRR-NY 525.12(m)(3), New York stipulates that "when considering conduct contributing the office shall examine the following mitigating factors: the victim was a minor, a victim of human trafficking, a sex worker, or a victim of sexual assault." Because New York considers contributory conduct in the reduction or denial of a victim compensation award but waives this requirement for specific victim circumstances, New York receives 0.5 points for this category.

Contributory conduct: Reduction or denial for survivors of victim	When a loved one is lost to violence, survivors of the victim must do the difficult work of putting them to rest and rebuilding their lives after loss. They should not be punished based on a subjective determination that the victim's actions contributed to their death. State receives the maximum of 1 point if, in statute, in cases of applications made by survivors of victims, the conduct of the victim is not considered. Points are awarded if this is the case for any type of compensation. For example, a state may choose not to consider contributory conduct in cases where survivors of victims apply for burial or counseling expenses. States that do not include provisions to deny or reduce victim compensation based on contributory conduct also receive 1 point for this category. States receive 0 points if, in statute, no exceptions are made for survivors of victims when considering contributory conduct of the victim.	1/1	In 2025, New York signed into law a budget bill that eliminated contributory conduct reductions and denials in cases resulting in the death of a victim, as follows: "If the crime upon which the claim is based resulted in the death of the victim, the office shall not consider whether, because of their conduct, the victim of such crime contributed to their death." New York therefore receives 1 point for this category.
Contributory conduct: Consideration of gang affiliation	The practice of labeling a person as being affiliated with a gang or having participated in gang-related activities is fraught with misinformation and racial profiling. Perceived gang affiliation should not be used to withhold critical support from a victim of violence. States receive the maximum of 1 point if, in statute, gang affiliation or association is not mentioned as a factor for consideration in the approval, denial, or reduction of victim compensation. States that do not include provisions to deny or reduce victim compensation based on contributory conduct also receive 1 point for this category. States receive 0 points for this category if, in statute or regulations, a victim or claimant's association or affiliation with a gang can be considered in the approval, denial, or reduction of their victim compensation award.	0/1	Under NY-CRR § 9-525.12(m) , New York specifically lists "gang activity" as conduct considered by the office in the determination to either reduce or deny and award. New York therefore receives 0 points for this category.
Contributory conduct: Consideration of illicit drug or alcohol involvement or use	States receive 1 point if, in statute or regulations, involvement with or use of illicit drugs is not mentioned as a potential factor in the approval, denial, or reduction of victim compensation. States which do not include provisions to deny or reduce victim compensation based on contributory conduct also receive 1 point for this category. States receive 0 points for this category if, in statute or regulations, a victim or claimant's involvement with or use of illicit drugs can be considered in the approval, denial, or reduction of their victim compensation award.	0/1	Under NY-CRR § 9-525.12(m) , New York specifically lists "dealing of illegal drugs" as conduct considered by the office in the determination to either reduce or deny and award. New York therefore receives 0 points for this category.

Conviction status or history	Having a conviction history does not prevent someone from becoming a victim of violence, nor does it make someone less deserving of support. Conviction histories should not be used to withhold critical support from a victim of violence. States receive the maximum 2 points if, in statute, there is either: 1) no explicit language that bars a victim or claimant from applying for or receiving a victim compensation award; or 2) an explicit inclusion that claimants cannot be denied compensation or have their compensation reduced based on the applicant's or victim's arrest or conviction history (pre- or post-victimization, probation or parole status, or due to outstanding fines and fees). States receive 0.5 points if, in statute, claimants can be denied compensation based on the victim's arrest or conviction history, but the state also codifies specific waivers to this rule under mitigating circumstances, including but not limited to being a victim of sexual assault or human trafficking and being a minor (under the age of 18) at the time of victimization. States receive 0 points if, in statute, a claimant can be denied compensation or have their compensation reduced based on the applicant's or victim's arrest or conviction history and the state does not codify exceptions to this rule.	2/2	As no specific exclusions for persons with a history of convictions exist in statute under C.L.N.Y § 18-22-624 , New York receives 2 points for this category.
Incarceration status or history	Denying incarcerated people compensation further exacerbates cycles of trauma and disenfranchisement, which victim compensation programs are intended to interrupt. Incarcerated people should be permitted to apply for and receive victim compensation. State receives the maximum 2 points if, in statute, there is either: 1) no explicit language that a victim or claimant currently incarcerated is barred from applying for or receiving a victim compensation award; or 2) there is a specific inclusion that a claimant cannot be denied compensation based on their incarceration status or if the harm on which the claim is based occurred while the victim was incarcerated. States receive 0.5 points if, in statute, the state codifies specific waivers to this rule under mitigating circumstances, including but not limited to being a victim of sexual assault or human trafficking and being a minor (under the age of 18) at the time of victimization. States receive 0 points for this category if, in statute or regulations, a claimant can be denied or receive reduced victim compensation based on being incarcerated or if the harm on which the claim is based occurred while the victim was incarcerated.	2/2	As no specific exclusions for incarcerated persons exist in statute under C.L.N.Y § 18-22-624 , New York receives 2 points for this category.

Category	Points Awarded For	Evaluation	Explanation
Eligibility for survivors of victims: Relationship definition	Many victim compensation programs limit who can access financial relief based on their relationship to a victim or a survivor. It is important that victim compensation programs recognize the impact of violence on witnesses and loved ones and that the state broadly defines who is considered a victim's loved one. States receive the maximum 2 points if, in statute, applicants with a relationship to the victim beyond shared household, legal status, or by blood are eligible for victim compensation. States receive 1 point if, in statute, household members—regardless of blood or legal relationship—are eligible for victim compensation, but the state does not consider relationships beyond household members. States receive 0 points if, in statute, the state only considers relationships defined by blood or legal status.	2/2	C.L.N.Y § 18-22-621 defines “family” to include “any person related to such person within the third degree of consanguinity or affinity, (b) any person maintaining a sexual relationship with such person, or (c) any person residing in the same household with such person.” As New York considers relationships beyond shared household, legal status, or by blood are eligible for victim compensation, New York receives 2 points for this category.
Eligibility for survivors of victims: Witnesses	Many victim compensation programs limit who can access financial relief based on their relationship to a victim or a survivor. It is important that victim compensation programs recognize the impact of violence on witnesses and loved ones and that the state broadly defines who is considered a victim's loved one. States receive the maximum 1 point if, in statute, the state stipulates that all witnesses to harm are eligible to receive victim compensation. States receive 0.5 points if, in statute, the state only makes those who were under the age of 18 when they witnessed harm eligible to receive victim compensation. States receive 0 points if, in statute, the state does not make witnesses to harm eligible to apply for victim compensation.	0.5/1	C.L.N.Y § 18-22-621(11) includes in its definition of “child victim,” a person under the age of 18 who “who suffers physical, mental or emotional injury, as a direct result of a crime ... or as a result of witnessing a crime....” Because New York includes witnesses as eligible victims to apply for an award, but only if they are under the age of 18, New York receives 0.5 points for this category.
Eligibility for survivors of victims: Willing or obligated to pay	It is important that victim compensation programs recognize and explicitly include individuals who step up in the immediate aftermath of violence to fill financial gaps for victims and survivors. States receive the maximum 1 point if, in statute, the state codifies that a person who willingly paid for or was obligated to pay for expenses related to a victim's harm is eligible for compensation. States receive 0 points if, in statute, the state does not codify that a person who willingly paid for or was obligated to pay for expenses related to a victim's harm is eligible for compensation.	1/1	C.L.N.Y § 18-22-631 , which establishes which persons can receive compensation, includes “any person or business represented by a person who has paid for or incurred the burial expenses of a victim.” In 2025, New York signed into law a budget bill including the following provision: “(l) any person not otherwise eligible under this subdivision who has paid for or incurred the crime scene cleanup expenses, provided that such person shall only be eligible to receive an award under this article for crime scene cleanup.” New York therefore receives 1 point for this category.

Experience with the process

States are evaluated based on the availability and amount of emergency awards and whether perspectives of individuals directly affected by violence are consulted or included in the administration of victim compensation awards.

Weighted score: 6/6

Multiplier: 1.5

Raw score: 4/4

Category	Points Awarded For	Evaluation	Explanation
Emergency awards	Most states use a reimbursement model to distribute victim compensation. Without immediate and up-front financial support from states, survivors risk experiencing undue financial hardship, which can compound the trauma of becoming a survivor. States should make emergency awards available to help alleviate these burdens. States receive a maximum 2 points if, in statute, the state codifies a process to determine which victim compensation applicants can receive an emergency, tentative, or expedited award to alleviate financial hardship, and the established limit for such an emergency award is equal to or above $3,750, after adjusting for the cost of living. States receive 1 point if, in statute, the state codifies an emergency award process, but the established limit for such an award is below $3,750, after adjusting for the cost of living. States receive 0 points if there is no codified process in statute for victim compensation applicants to receive an emergency award.	2/2	C.L.N.Y § 18-22-630 authorizes the office to grant an emergency award when an award “probably will be made, and undue hardship will result to the claimant if immediate payment is not made.” Such an award is capped at $2,500 or $6,000 if for funeral or burial expenses. Adjusted for the cost of living in New York, this is equivalent to $5,574.86. As this is above $3,750.00, New York receives 2 points for this category.
Inclusion of victim, provider, and/or advocate perspectives	To meet survivors where they are, it is essential that victim compensation programs are trauma informed, extend compassion, and listen and learn from survivors’ experiences. States can do so by including survivors in victim compensation program decisionmaking processes. States receive the maximum of 2 points if, in statute or regulations, the state requires at least one survivor to be included in the application review process or in advisory capacity to the review board. States receive 1 point if, in statute or regulations, the state requires at least one person with direct experience supporting survivors be included in the application review process or in an advisory capacity. States without this requirement receive 0 points.	2/2	C.L.N.Y § 18-22-623 charges the Office of Victim Services with establishing an “advisory council to assist in formulation of policies on the problems of crime victims.” Under the guidelines of the Office of Victim Services’ advisory council, the 16-member council must include “individuals who have lived experience as victims of crime.” New York therefore receives 2 points for this category.
